

Shannon Janis is a senior finance and tax executive with extensive experience advising boards and executive leadership on complex regulatory, risk, and capital allocation matters. She currently serves as Vice President, Global Tax and Finance Transformation at onsemi, a Fortune 500, publicly traded semiconductor company, where she oversees global tax strategy, financial reporting impacts, risk management, and governance across U.S. and international jurisdictions.

Ms. Janis regularly briefs the Audit Committee and senior management on high-risk, judgment-driven issues, translating complex tax and regulatory developments into clear, decision-relevant insights focused on cash impact, earnings durability, controls, and risk exposure. She has led enterprise-level initiatives with material strategic and financial impact, including global audit resolution, legal entity rationalization, and monetization of government incentives.

In addition to her executive role, Ms. Janis has nonprofit board experience and has testified before the U.S. Senate Finance Committee on tax and manufacturing policy. She brings a disciplined, governance-focused approach and understands the board's role in oversight, strategic guidance, and risk assessment rather than operational detail.
